Dear Senator Prentice and Representative Sommers:

Pursuant to the Extraordinary Criminal Justice Costs Act, the Office of Public Defense (OPD) has evaluated the counties' 2007 petitions for state reimbursement of costs incurred in aggravated murder cases. First, as required by the statute, OPD audited the veracity of the petitions. OPD disallowed undocumented expenses that were claimed in the petitions. The undersigned directors of OPD, the Washington Association of Prosecuting Attorneys (WAPA), and the Washington Association of Sheriffs and Police Chiefs (WASPC) then met to prioritize the petitions. This year, the list includes claims by King, Klickitat, and Yakima Counties.

The statute names three factors for reimbursement consideration: disproportionate fiscal impact relative to the county criminal justice budget, efficient use of resources, and whether the costs were extraordinary and could not be reasonably accommodated and anticipated in the normal budget process.

The attached 2007 Extraordinary Criminal Justice Costs Act list shows the claimed aggravated murder cases' impact on the counties' budgets. The impact is derived by dividing the cost of the claimed cases by the county's criminal justice budget. Factors that make these costs extraordinary and prevent them from being "reasonably accommodated and anticipated in the normal budget process" are specific to the individual circumstances of each case and to the counties in which they arose. Each county articulated measures showing efficient use of resources and reasons that the case costs were difficult to accommodate and anticipate in the normal budget process.

A summary of the three counties' claims is as follows:

King County

Number of 2007 cases claimed: 7

Total amount claimed and supported by documentation: $855,145

Klickitat County

Number of 2007 cases claimed: 2

Total 2007 amount claimed: $159,900

Amount supported by documentation: $154,856

Number of 2006 cases claimed: 2

Total 2006 amount claimed and supported by documentation: $182,874

Number of 2005 cases claimed: 2

Total amount claimed and supported by documentation: $177,566

3-year total for Klickitat: $501,876

Yakima County

Number of 2007 cases claimed: 2

Total amount claimed: $742,837

Amount supported by documentation: $737,514
